Mounties killed in shooting rampage

Moncton, N.B. Horrific violence sparks manhunt for 24-year-old suspect after at least three RCMP officers confirmed dead

Quoted

"I was shocked and saddened to learn of tonight's tragic situation in Moncton."

New Brunswick Premier David Alward in a statement

The RCMP says three of its officers were killed in Moncton, N.B., and two other officers were injured by a man armed with guns as the Mounties conducted a manhunt across the city's north end on Wednesday night for the shooter.

The RCMP tweeted that three of its officers were "mortally wounded" and police spokesman Paul Greene confirmed that they are dead.

Greene said the two RCMP officers who were taken to hospital suffered non life-threatening injuries.

The RCMP said on Twitter that they were looking for 24-year-old Justin Bourque of Moncton. Police tweeted an image of a suspect wearing military camouflage and wielding two guns.

Const. Damien Theriault said police were urging people in the area to stay inside their homes and lock their doors. Drivers were also asked to stay out of the area.

Shortly before midnight, police said they believed the suspect was at large in the Pinehurst subdivision area of the city.

Police had a number of roads in the city blocked and traffic was backed up on major arteries across Moncton.

The RCMP released its first information on the shooting at about 9:15 p.m. through Twitter.

Danny Leblanc, 42, said he saw the shooter in the distance Wednesday evening, wearing a camouflage outfit and standing in the middle of the street with his gun pointed at police cars.

The construction worker said he believed it was an RCMP officer until he heard a burst of automatic gunfire coming from the man's gun.

"That guy was standing on the road afterwards and he was looking towards us," he said, adding he quickly retreated into his home and remained there with his family and young children. At one point a neighbour posted on social media that their kitchen window was shattered by gunfire.

Leblanc said few people on his normally quiet street were sleeping as they awaited word at midnight on whether arrests had been made.

"It's just crazy. We're chatting with our friends on Facebook and we're not going to bed until this guy is caught. I'm sure nobody in Moncton is sleeping because he seems to be all over the place," he said.

Word that police had been killed has shocked the city, he said.

"It's devastating. I don't know if he was on a hunt for them, or what," he said.

French-language funding leads to clashing views

Education debate. NDP urges province to offer strapped board money to pay teachers in June, but government says no

MARCO VIGLIOTTI
Metro in Regina

The Saskatchewan NDP is urging the province to hike funding to the Conseil des Écoles Fransaskoises (CEF) due to concerns that the francophone board might need to delay paying its teachers until it receives its next government allotment.

Trent Wotherspoon, education critic for the New Democrats, wants the government to agree to a mid-term funding adjustment for all Saskatchewan school boards to ensure that they can meet their fiscal obligations.

"The francophone school division has reached a tipping point," Wotherspoon said, referring to a CEF request to delay a payday for June.

"It's appalling and concerning that this government is failing to support education."

The Saskatchewan Party government, however, maintains that it has made significant investments in improving French-language education, including with an increase in funding of about $3 million to the CEF in its 2014-15 budget.

Education Minister Don Morgan said the government spends, on average, about $9,000 more per student on the francophone division than on the public and Catholic systems.

"They will be, by far, the best-funded school division in the province," Morgan told Metro.

"(Their funding) continues to go up ... substantially."

Morgan added that the government is open to allowing the CEF to tap into its next allotment earlier to meet payroll obligations.

News of the francophone board's funding shortfall comes on the heels of an announcement that the Conseil Scolaire Fransaskois — which oversees the CEF — has cut back on its spending by $4.4 million to improve its financial stability.

Six-year-olds Jillian Russell, right, and Isobel Lindsay participate in a potato-sack race during the 26th PotashCorp Children's Festival of Saskatchewan. Amber Huck, an associate producer with the event, says typically anywhere from 20,000 to 25,000 attendees enjoy the activities and entertainment over the course of the full program, which ran this year from May 31 to June 4. She added that this is the only arts and culture festival of its kind geared toward kids under 12 in the province. For more photos, visit metronews.ca.

Regina's air quality 'good to excellent': Report

The air quality in Regina's neighbourhoods and industrial areas is "good to excellent," a report says.

Initiated by the provincial Ministry of Environment, the one-year Air Quality Monitoring Study is the first of its kind in Saskatchewan.

"When you ask somebody, they would say they think our air quality is pretty good — but now we have confirmation of that," Environment Minister Ken Cheveldayoff told media on Wednesday at the legislative grounds in Regina.

According to the report, Regina's air quality poses a low health risk as it was 97 per cent safe during the testing period. The next monitoring study will begin in Saskatoon this summer.

The province also announced the creation of the Great Plains Air Zone, which encompasses Regina, Moose Jaw and Yorkton.

Air zones are regions that have similar air quality characteristics. The zones allow organizations to easily pinpoint issues within the areas. Saskatchewan has three air zones, including the newly created one.

"When I talked to other ministers of environment across the country, they were very interested in the work we've done on air zones," Cheveldayoff said.

Computer glitch affected some test results: Saskatoon Health Region

The Saskatoon Health Region says a laboratory computer printing glitch may have left more than 600 patients with delayed or unsent tests results over the past few years.

The region says codes for 14 tests were not entered into their printing system, meaning that 1,015 test results for 620 patients were not automatically printed out and sent to local physicians.

An investigation revealed 90 per cent of the errors occurred in the last two years, but some stretch back to 2007.

The health region was alerted to the problem in late May when a doctor called to say he had not received results for a test.

The region said the glitch mainly affected outpatients who were being tested for virus antibodies and other markers and there is no threat to public health safety.

Dr. Joseph Blondeau says none of the tests involved anyone who was an inpatient, who was in an emergency situation or who was moderately or severely ill and had nothing to do with any types of diagnosis related to cancer.

Urban agriculture project engages Saskatoon youth

Hands-on experience. Garden Patch partners with Core Neighbourhood Youth Co-op, offers young people paid internships

JACOB MORGAN
jacob.morgan@metronews.ca

This summer the Saskatoon Food Bank and Learning Centre's urban agriculture project is branching out.

For the first time, the Garden Patch has partnered with the Core Neighbourhood Youth Co-op to offer six young people between the ages of 16 and 22 a paid internship position.

"Some of them are really passionate about gardening," program co-ordinator Terri Lynn Paulson said. "Some have never participated before."

She said that growing plants together — in addition to affording valuable technical experience down in the dirt — is a great way for the youth to learn how to work as a team.

"That can be a pretty formative experience," she said.

Each intern will receive training in such life skills as writing a resumé, standing out in an interview and, of course, preparing the vegetables they harvest.

Brit MacDonald, a community developer and the urban agriculture manager with the food bank, said other new undertakings for the fifth season include a seed-saving initiative and a compost study.

But the Garden Patch is also continuing to beautify the city with its roughly 1.5-acre site in the 900 block of 3rd Avenue North and serve those in need.

"It's part of our commitment to provide fresh nutritious food and healthy food in our food hampers," MacDonald said.

And, she said, the educational component on self-sustainability is in line with the food bank's goal of "addressing the underlying issues of poverty."

Last year, more than 500 Garden Patch volunteers helped generate around 19,000 pounds of produce for the organization. "Many hands make light work," said MacDonald. "So we value our volunteers."

Visit saskatoonfoodbank.org/gardenpatch for more information about how individuals, groups and businesses can get involved.

Gaps in provincial electronic health-info system: Auditor

The latest report by Saskatchewan's auditor reveals major gaps and inconsistencies in the government's electronic health records system.

Acting auditor Judy Ferguson says the government started the system in 1997 and it doesn't know when it will be done or how much it will cost.

The provincial government has so far spent $502 million on the system.

Ferguson says different health regions are at different stages of implementation, which is causing lots of problems.

The report says some patients carry their own records between hospitals and clinics because a comprehensive record of their health information is not accessible between different health regions and organizations.

Ferguson calls gaps in the system "troubling," adding that they create delays in patient care and can lead to duplicate and unnecessary medical tests.

"In order to realize those benefits, you have to get it substantively done," said Ferguson.

She wants to see the province standardize the data that goes into the electronic record. Ferguson also says more money needs to be pumped into the technology that is needed for the system to flourish.

Ferguson also wants the government to implement a multi-year operational plan.

The auditor's report also touched on wastewater system regulation. It outlined ways the Water Security Agency can better regulate public wastewater systems so that risks to the environment and the public from improperly treated wastewater are reduced.

Pimps and johns targeted in Tories' 'made-in-Canada' prostitution bill

Legislation. New list of offences intended to reduce demand for sex services and protect sex workers: Conservatives

The Conservative government has introduced legislation to criminalize the purchase of sexual services.

The long-awaited bill would also crack down on those who reap a material benefit from prostitution.

Justice Minister Peter MacKay says the "made-in-Canada" model is aimed at targeting johns and pimps while protecting the vulnerable.

The new prostitution-related offences are intended to reduce demand for sexual services and protect those who sell such services from exploitation, as well as shield children and communities, the government says.

The bill would create new offences for:

— The purchase of sexual services and communicating in any place for that purpose.

— Receiving a financial or material benefit from the prostitution of others, including through businesses that sell the sexual services of others online or out of venues such as escort agencies, massage parlours, or strip clubs that also provide sexual services.

— Advertising the sale of sexual services in print media or on the Internet.

— Communicating for the purpose of selling sexual services in public places where a child could reasonably be expected to be present.

The legislation is the government's response to a Supreme Court of Canada decision in December that struck down key provisions of the country's prostitution laws.

While the court ruled the laws were unconstitutional, it gave the government a year to replace them.

Under the old laws, prostitution itself was legal but almost all related activities — including communicating in a public place for the purposes of prostitution, pimping and running a brothel — were criminal offences.

The new bill comes just two days after the Justice Department released the results of an online consultation which showed that a slim majority of respondents felt that buying sex should be illegal.

However, two-thirds of the more than 31,000 respondents said they thought selling sex should not be an offence.

Toronto uses tower power in branded condom rollout

Toronto unwrapped its very own city-branded condom design Wednesday, featuring the phallic point of the CN Tower and three aptly chosen city street signs: Cummer Avenue, Wood Street and Coxwell Avenue.

Toronto Public Health tweeted out the design of "condomTO" in six separate tweets, starting at 9 a.m.

A message on the condom's package reads, "No matter which way you go, put it on!"

The condom, launched by the health agency, comes two weeks before World Pride celebrations kick off in the city on June 20.

Dr. David McKeown, the city's medical officer, says the condom's main goal is to get Torontonians talking about safe sex — and using condoms.

"This is a lighthearted approach to what is a serious subject," he said. "We want to raise awareness and try something new and different to get people thinking about safer sex. We're trying to make it something that people in Toronto will talk about."

About 60 people die from HIV in Toronto annually, he added. Using condoms is an effective way to prevent sexually transmitted diseases but statistics show many people choose not to use them.

The AIDS Committee of Toronto welcomed the move by Toronto Public Health, but pointed out only men's, not women's, condoms were available.

"The message doesn't start and end with condoms in a bowl," said spokesman Rafay Agha.

"But kudos to Toronto Public Health. The more safer-sex options people have, the better. It's also a great starting point for a conversation. Our symbol of the city is a phallic building."

Big chill over docs prescribing pot

Rx marijuana. Through arrangement with private firm, Toronto doc now seeing patients via Skype for pot scripts

TREVOR GREENWAY
trevor.greenway@metronews.ca

Canadian doctors who prescribe medical marijuana are feeling a chill, as health officials apply pressure on them not to prescribe a drug they know little about.

A doctor in Toronto was willing to go on the record with Metro to talk about the stigma surrounding medical pot and the benefits patients derive from the drug. But when he heard several colleagues are being scrutinized by the College of Physicians and Surgeons, he backed out.

"Patients' doctors do not want to prescribe and they think that the college has said that you cannot prescribe," said the doctor, who we agreed to keep anonymous. "It's uncomfortable and there is a stigma behind it."

The physician has started seeing patients via Skype — who are connected with him through a private firm for a $300 fee — as more and more patients are finding it tough to find a doctor willing to sign off on a pot prescription. He says telemedicine is sufficient for such consultations and the patients provide him and the firm government-issued identification and their medical records.

Skype scripts?

"Prescribing is a medical act that requires an appropriate evaluation of the patient ... and that can't be done if you do not see the patient."
Dr. Yves Robert, Quebec College of Physicians

It took Sandy Daviau more than a decade to find a doctor willing to prescribe pot for his MS. TREVOR GREENWAY/METRO

He said the problem is the fact there is no scientific data for doctors to reference when considering prescribing pot to patients with multiple sclerosis, cancer and various chronic pain conditions.

"Physicians receive no training," he said.

Sandy Daviau spent more than a decade looking for a doctor to prescribe the drug for his multiple sclerosis. He said with the recent changes to Health Canada's medical pot program, which makes doctors the ultimate gatekeepers of the drug, more and more patients are finding it hard to access the drug.

"It's worse than before," said Daviau, whose initial physician Dr. Rob Kamermans was ordered to close his Coe Hill clinic and was charged with fraud, forgery and money laundering after he signed off on 4,000 pot prescriptions in a year. It's stories like these that have doctors worried they will get nabbed for trying to help. "There is a clampdown going on right now. There is a political war going on out there behind the scenes and we are the pawns right now."

The College of Physicians of Ontario told Metro the federal pot program changes provide "significant concern," as doctors are expected to prescribe a drug that has no clinical studies. The Quebec college is concerned about doctors prescribing pot as well, especially via telemedicine or Skype. They are forbidden from using telemedicine right now in Quebec.

Sweet to sour. Burt of Burt's Bees buzzed back to Maine after love affair with staffer

Conventional wisdom suggests the Burt behind Burt's Bees left the company after he became disillusioned with the corporate world in North Carolina and wanted to return to his solitary life in Maine.

The reality, Burt Shavitz says, is that he was forced out by co-founder Roxanne Quimby after he had an affair with an employee.

So the man on the Burt's Bees logo that promises "Earth-friendly natural personal care products" ended up with 37 acres in Maine, and an undisclosed sum of money.

And he's not complaining.

"In the long run, I got the land, and land is everything. Land is positively everything. And money is nothing really worth squabbling about. This is what puts people six feet under. You know, I don't need it," he told a filmmaker on the property where the company was launched in the 1980s.

The reclusive beekeeper whose simple life became complicated by his status as a corporate icon is now the subject of a documentary, Burt's Buzz, which opens Friday in cities including New York, Los Angeles, Miami, Chicago, Phoenix and Cleveland.

Interviewed by The Associated Press on his land in Maine, Shavitz declined to discuss his relationship with Quimby.

"What I have in this situation is no regret," he said, sitting in a rocking chair. "The bottom line is she's got her world and I've got mine, and we let it go at that."

GAME OF BLEEDING RAINBOWS & BAD ACCENTS

HE SAYS

John Mazerolle
metronews.ca

Game of Thrones is one of the most intensely loved shows in the history of television, which is interesting for a show that does not love you back.

The sword-and-sorcery-and-rape-and-decapitation fantasy series has its moments of joy and hope, but they're mostly there so they can be snatched away from you, like a child's toy, your shocked face part of the latest YouTube reaction montage.

Author George R.R. Martin wrote the books the series is based on, so he can be blamed for most of the emotional wallop. Then the show producers looked at a book series full of sexual assault, decapitation, castration and people getting slaughtered at weddings and said, "Hey, could be worse. Let's make it worse!"

It all came to a head in the most recent episode as the emotional and physical pain combined perfectly when (spoiler!) a much-loved character had his skull slowly crushed ON SCREEN, destroying hope and brains in equal measure. (Double spoiler!: He died.)

The impact of that scene had me thinking about what Martin could have done with some of television's most famous programs.

If all TV were like Game of Thrones …

* If Martin had written Seinfeld, the Master of My Domain episode would have been about who can go the longest without losing their genitals.

* If Martin had written Reading Rainbow, the theme song would have been, "Butterfly in the sky/Loses its wings and dies/Dare to look/Within my book/A Bleeding Rainbow (death by crossbow!)"

* If Martin had written WKRP, Les Nessman's cuts would have been fatal.

* If Martin had written The Mary Tyler Moore Show, Mary would have thrown her hat in the air and been hit by a truck.

* If Martin had written The Wire, the mayor of Baltimore would have been a conniving narcissist with unbridled lust for power and women, played by an Irish actor with a deeply unconvincing accent.

* If Martin had written Friends, one episode would have been called The One About the Incestuous Rape Over the Barely Warm Corpse of Their Child.

* If Martin had written The X-Files,Scully would have said dragons don't exist while a dragon was eating her.

* If Martin had written Freaks and Geeks, it would have been Carrie.

* If Martin had written The Daily Show with Jon Stewart, your Moment of Zen would have been the anguished screams of the dying.

* If Martin had written The Larry Sanders Show, it would have been exactly the same. He loves that guy.

As you can see, I'm sort of obsessed. I feel like if the show has gotten us this invested, it must take a happy turn soon, right? I've got a good feeling about next week. And if the good guys don't start winning, I swear, heads will roll.

Felines: 'The universal mode of communication'

Artist based in St. Petersburg, Russia

After her mother died, artist Svetlana Petrova went into a deep depression. A friend suggested dressing up Zarathustra, the kitty Petrova inherited from her mom, in costumes for a photo session as a pick-me-up. But the cat was so fat that he couldn't fit into anything. Instead, Petrova photoshopped him into works of art. Metro sat down with Petrova to get more details.

Are you a big fan of memes? I love the concept. If I were to return to university I'd write a thesis on it. But I want to make memes that are pretty. Many memes are just plain ugly.

Why do cats have such appeal? Cats are the universal mode of communication. We may all speak different languages but we're all lovers of cats. They're a way of bringing us together to do good. For example, two years ago there was Hank, a cat that ran for the U.S. senate. For his campaign, I helped design some fake dollar bills with his picture on them. The project raised a lot of money for animal charities in the U.S. and Russia. So we managed to do good, not through people but through a cat. METRO

Sum Theatre hopes the Pied Piper lures people in droves

New summer tradition. Theatre-in-the-park organizers hope to build on success of last year's Alice in Wonderland with a new show

BACKSTAGE PASS

A 700-year-old story of children being lured away from their homes might not sound like light, summertime fare. But Sum Theatre artistic director Joel Bernbaum says that the tale of the Pied Piper is actually misunderstood.

"Everyone knows the name (of the story), but very few people know the details, which is perfect for theatre in the park," Bernbaum said.

We want people to know the name and come see the show, but we want the ticket to their imaginations and to be able to tell the story the way we want to tell it."

Bernbaum and Sum Theatre will be presenting their unique take on the Pied Piper — which he says has more to do with the importance of community — throughout the summer for their second year of theatre in the park.

They will do 20 free shows in 20 different outdoor venues, as Bernbaum says the idea behind the project comes down to one word: accessibility.

"You hear theatre companies tossing this word around, but what does it truly mean?

"(For us) it means we'll eliminate all the barriers. Not only the barrier of cost, but the barrier of travel. We come to you."

And residents of the communities that hosted performances last year responded in droves to Sum's production of Alice in Wonderland, far exceeding Bernbaum's expectations.

"This had never been done before in Saskatchewan, so when you have a new thing, you don't know what's going to happen. I had hoped for 30 to 50 people a night. By the end of the run we had over 300 at each performance and 4,055 for the run of the show. It was amazing."

Bernbaum had initially considered keeping the Lewis Carroll theme going for year two of theatre in the park, but the response to last year's show actually persuaded him to not go back down the rabbit hole.

"We had so many people come for Alice, we thought it would be a shame to do something similar. We needed to do something totally different. And then it occurred to me: Why don't we do something that has the message of community that we preach offstage?"

Still, if Bernbaum has his way, there will be plenty of opportunity to revisit Alice in the future, in addition to countless other characters and plays.

"I believe we're back to stay. Anyone can do something once, but when it goes that well you want to keep it going. I feel it is Saskatoon's new summer tradition."

Sum Theatre artistic director Joel Bernbaum, with help from John Lake school students, announces this year's theatre-in-the-park production: The Pied Piper. SIMON HIATT FOR METRO

Synopsis of the piper

The 700-year-old story is still 'misunderstood' by many, according to Bernbaum.

- The Pied Piper. The tale of the Pied Piper has been told by the Brothers Grimm and Robert Browning among others, but some scholars believe it may have a historical basis. The earliest record of the story was a stained glass window in a church in Hamelin, Germany that depicted a colourful piper leading away children dressed in white. Some believe it is a reference to a plague that took many young lives, while others have suggested a landslide, pilgrimage or migration to other parts of Europe that caused children to leave the town.

50 blames his terrible pitching on too much hand practice

MELINDA TAUB
Metro World News in New York City

50 Cent is sure living life to the fullest this summer. First he throws the worst first pitch ever at a Mets game. Then he has a rival robbed onstage. Now he says he masturbated so much he hurt his bones.

No, not that bone.

Fiddy is blaming that dismal first pitch on a sort of repetitive stress injury. In his Reddit AMA Tuesday, he said, "I have a skeletal muscle injury from excessive masturbation so take it easy lol."

Will do! Then again, most of us do not have to pitch at Major League baseball games, so we are free to abuse ourselves as extravagantly as we choose, no matter how fraught with peril our technique may be.

In that same AMA, 50 Cent also said he used to bench press 405 pounds, so perhaps the injury had other causes. He also showed his nerdy side: When asked what would be his dream movie role, he replied, "One of the Marvel franchise. Or Star Wars."

Just be careful how many times you swing the light sabre.

In post-breakup, Mayer becomes muse to Katy Perry

At this point, we'll soon be able to put out a compilation album of songs written about John Mayer. His most recent ex, Katy Perry, tells Cosmopolitan that fans shouldn't be surprised to hear some tunes on forthcoming albums inspired by their breakup. "There's no bad blood, but I'm sure there will be inspired songs," she tells the magazine.

Taylor Swift, another of Mayer's exes, also penned a tune or two about the singer.

Mayer, for his part, isn't too worried about the output. "I have super-strength for gang-ups," he tells TMZ. "I'm fine. That's what you're supposed to do, man. You're supposed to write songs. You're just not supposed to tell everybody you're doing it."

Kourtney Kardashian is expecting, many selfies to follow

The Kardashian-Jenner family may still be on a high from Kim's wedding, but now they have another reason to celebrate. Kourtney and boyfriend Scott Disick are reportedly expecting their third child. Us Weekly is reporting that she is a few months along, and you can count on the mag — as well as other tabloids — to document her ever-growing bump throughout the coming months.

So far, the couple and the Kardashian clan haven't officially announced the pregnancy in the press or on social media. But you know this family can't keep quiet for long.

Kardashian and Disick have two children together already.

Sofia Vergara

Loeb's pals couldn't be happier about split from Sofia Vergara

Last month, Sofia Vergara announced the end of her two-year engagement to Nick Loeb, and apparently his friends are thrilled by the news, according to Page Six. "I'm happy to see her go. Good riddance," one of businessman Loeb's pals said, shooting down claims that Loeb was using the relationship to ride Vergara's coattails.

According to the friend, the Modern Family actress was "rude" during group dinners, ignoring others and constantly checking her phone and Twitter account. "She only joins the conversation if it's about her."

Fashion designers are turning to crowdfunding to boost brand buzz, profile and bottom line

Sunny Fong recently reached out to online donors to expand his VAWK label. In a video on his Indiegogo fundraising page, Fong appealed for help to stage his World MasterCard Fashion Week runway show in Toronto in March as well as aid to launch his label's first online store. KEITH BEATY / TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Dylan Uscher works mainly with independent boutiques to feature his creations, but the designer hopes that crowdfunding will help elevate his label from budding brand to booming success.

The self-taught American designer recently moved back to Boston after eight years in Toronto where he launched Dylanium Knits in 2010.

Uscher has partnered with Luevo — a Canadian crowdfunding platform for designers — to help pre-sell his fall collection of knitwear inspired by Florentine architecture. His online campaign ends June 15.

"It's always a struggle when you're an independent business owner because you have to work really hard to get the very little that you have," Uscher said. "This just seemed like a really great outlet to try and get some new sales."

All items in his collection featured on Luevo are 15 per cent less than the suggested retail price.

And Uscher will only produce them if the products reach designated targets among customers who've pledged to purchase the designs, which include scarves, a slouch hat and cape.

"Instead of using hypothetical market research or numbers that someone else has designed, you can put your own products out there and really test ... what products are going to work and what colours work and what doesn't," Uscher said.

"I think that's the really interesting way to approach it without having to go through all of the process of producing the items yourself and hoping that they sell."

Luevo co-founder Ana Caracaleanu said the site launched with its first designers in March and plans to keep the number of labels featured in their "curated marketplace" to under 10 for now, with campaigns of 30 to 45 days.

Luevo takes a 15 per cent commission from successfully funded projects but also works to support designers in other ways such as editing news releases and producing written content, she added.

"For the designers, the value that we bring is our technology to crowdsource items that are not yet produced. They don't have to pull the inventory," Caracaleanu said. "They could use us as a step in growing their businesses or scaling up, and then taking their productions to a larger site where they may be requested to have ... the inventory to put their items there."

Christopher Charlesworth is co-founder of HiveWire, a crowdfunding and crowdsourcing solutions provider. He isn't surprised to see designers pursuing crowdfunding as capital- and buzz-building strategy.

"We think there's a really unique opportunity for not only startup entrepreneurs but specifically for fashion designers because they can present truly unique wares that are literally unavailable quite often in any other place.

"For many startup designers, they don't have access to the traditional distribution channels. Crowdfunding allows them to connect directly with a unique audience that is potentially interested in their goods."

The platform also offers the opportunity to take risks with designs they might not be able to produce when dealing with a mainstream chain, Charlesworth noted.

THIS EXTER SLOUCH HAT IN SILVER FROM DYLANIUM KNITS RETAILS FOR $105 BUT IS CURRENTLY SELLING ON LUEVO FOR $89.

The pros and cons of the crowdsourcing concept

Darren Meister, an associate professor of business at Western University in London, Ont., said he thinks a bigger risk from a fashion perspective is the ability to see the designs — and potential interest from consumers — posted online for all to see. That includes major retailers who may jump on creating their own versions.

- Yet Meister said he also sees the possibility of rewards for emerging designers using the platform to make their mark, and some sales in the process.
- What the crowdfunding model allows you is to try a more things, get more immediate feedback and improve your designs, he said. "If I'm a designer and I put up 20 designs and I see these three are the ones that are catching on, I'm probably going to focus on those three."

The B.C. coast comes to your home

Sophisticated Bohemian (Sobo) has gone from food truck to destination restaurant in Tofino, B.C. to a cookbook. Lisa Ahier (the restaurant's chef and owner) has teamed up with Andrew Morrison (a food writer) for a release that focuses on locally sourced, seasonally inspired ingredients — just like the restaurant that inspired it. Among the 100 recipes included are: Crab and Goat Cheese Wontons, BBQ Bison Flank Streak, Thai Chicken in Roti, Mascarpone Cheesecake and more. METRO

The best of the west: Killer Fish Tacos

Lunch or dinner. Nothing screams summer more than fresh fruit, and this recipe takes nature's and mixes it with crispy fish

"I've always adjusted this recipe according to what fish is readily available. In New York, I used snapper, and in Texas, I used bass," writes Lisa Ahier in her book The Sobo Cookbook.

"Here in B.C., salmon and halibut have become my all-time favourites. This recipe was featured in The Best American Recipes 2000, edited by Fran McCullough and Suzanne Hamlin, and in The Gourmet Cookbook, edited by Ruth Reichl."

1. Prepare the fresh fruit salsa.

2. Cut the salmon and halibut into 1-inch cubes and season with salt.

3. Heat the oil in a large frying pan over medium-high heat. Add the onion and sauté for 1 minute. Add the fish and fry for about 3 minutes, until just cooked Add the chipotle chilies and sauté for 2 or 3 more minutes. Remove from the heat.

4. Fill the taco shells halfway with the fish mixture, then top with the salsa. Serve immediately, two tacos per person.

Fresh Fruit Salsa

This salsa should reflect the season, so don't be a slave to the recipe. I mix it up all the time, combining fruits like peaches and blueberries with watermelon, or pineapple with avocado. Buy what's fresh.

1. Combine all ingredients and refrigerate until ready to use. This salsa will stand up for about 24 hours, after which time the fruit begins to break down.

Turf the mower and go wild

Let nature have its way with your lawn. Wildflowers, native species are alternatives to traditional grass turf

It's the time of year when homeowners devote countless hours to keeping their lawns lush and green only to have watering restrictions imposed by many municipalities later in the season — causing lawns to dry out and even turn brown.

All that time and labour invested in keeping a lawn green with sometimes a disappointing outcome is leading many homeowners to consider alternatives.

Christian Barnard, owner of Victoria's Christian Barnard Land Studio, says many of his clients are beginning to ask him about options other than traditional turf.

Biodiversity

"I think a lot of the clients I have now are looking for something that is more biodiverse, because they equate turf with high resource input," says Barnard. "When homeowners think of turf, they think of lawn mowers and Weed Eaters, and so they should to a certain degree." One of his clients trained dogs in her 15-by-15-metre plot of grass. In her case turf was never going to be a long-lasting or easy-care option, and he recommended artificial or synthetic turf.

Greener than grass

"One man's weed is another man's flower."

Christian Barnard, owner of Victoria, B.C.'s Christian Barnard Land Studio

Synthetic turf

"Synthetic turf has come a long, long way, and it is amazing how real it can look. But if I had my way I tend to steer a lot of my clients into a more biodiverse option for turf," he says.

Wild flowers

Barnard recommends to a lot of clients to let their turf lawns naturalize, which means reducing the mowing and trimming, and allowing native wildflowers to return. He also says he uses a wildflower seed mix instead of turf.

Embrace weeds

With 171 municipalities, and all of Ontario and Quebec, banning pesticide and herbicide use, a certified horticulturalist says homeowners have to develop a tolerance for weeds.

"People are looking at their lawns and what was the status quo and realizing they can't have the green weed-free lawn anymore, and looking for alternatives," says Jason Erb, owner of Victoria's The Gardeners of Oliphant.

Hardscaping

Introducing hardscaping like patios and pathways is another option for reducing lawn space, and Erb says pathways can add flow to a backyard.

Grow edibles

"The other alternative is veggies and pushing the need for edibles in a landscape," he says. THE CANADIAN PRESS

MAKE YOUR SPRING EXTRA GREEN

DONATE CLOTHES, HOUSEHOLD ITEMS AT VALUE VILLAGE

Are you looking for more ways to contribute positively to the environment in your everyday life? Shop second-hand.

The clothing you wear and give away can make a big impact on the environment. On average, each North American throws away more than 30 kilograms (68 pounds) of clothing and textiles each year.

The good news is that nearly 100 per cent of that is reusable or recyclable. So this season while you are combing through your closet, packing away your sweaters and getting out those shorts and T-shirts, make your spring extra green by donating your clothes and household items at Value Village.

"Donating the clothes you don't need anymore is a simple, easy way for anyone to go green in their everyday lives," says Tony Shumpert, vice-president of recycling operations for Value Village. "It might seem like a small contribution, but over time one person can make a really big difference."

Value Village is one of the largest recyclers of used clothing in the world, keeping more than 294,000 metric tonnes (approximately 650 million pounds — that's the size of two cruise ships) of quality goods from landfills by selling reusable items in-store and responsibly recycling items unsuitable for resale.

CONTRIBUTED

Last year, Value Village repurposed 329 million tops, 59 million pairs of shoes, 114 million pairs of pants and 28 million coats.

Of course, second-hand shoppers are just as important as donors. Visiting your local thrift store is a great way to find good quality, one-of-a-kind items for excellent prices. Shoppers can look good and go green at the same time.

"Value Village works with community partners like Big Brothers Big Sisters and the Canadian Diabetes Association to keep goods out of landfills and give pre-loved clothing a brand new life," Shumpert says. "You never know what treasures you'll find — thrift shopping makes recycling fun."

For more, visit valuevillage.com.

SUPPORTING COMMUNITIES

Make room for your fresh new finds by cleaning out the old clothes you don't wear anymore. Value Village pays local non-profits every time you donate, helping to support their programs and services within the community.

"Our goal at Value Village is to support our communities across Canada," says Tony Shumpert, vice-president of recycling operations for Value Village. "We consider community investment an essential component of our business."

Over the past 10 years, Value Village has purchased more than $1.5 billion of goods from its partners, turning otherwise unused items into sustainable funding that supports the non-profit's vital community programs and services.

Helping out the community — now that's truly stylish.

Dig through fashion gold mines

Unique style is a coveted quality. This is true now more than ever thanks to street style blogs like the Sartorialist, Street Peeper, Face Hunter, and many others.

"Second-hand shopping has become the fashionista's secret weapon," says Tony Shumpert, vice-president of recycling operations for Value Village. "You never know what you're going to find there, and sometimes it's a gold mine."

Here's how to find your style at Value Village:

LOOK FOR HIGH-QUALITY MATERIALS

The fabrics you choose will make a difference in the longevity of your garments. Keep your eyes open for high-quality textiles like silk or wool. These materials wear well, last a long time and never go out of style. Value Village purposely selects high-quality clothing, and puts more than 5,000 to 10,000 new items out every day.

CHECK THE LABEL

Chanel, Nike, Lululemon, Aritzia brands such as Wilfred and TNA — high-quality brand names are frequent finds at Value Village. As you are sifting through the racks, watch the labels. You will find items for $10 that would have originally retailed for hundreds.

TRY IT ON

At Value Village, clothing is arranged by size so you can easily find the best fit for you, but since every item is different, make sure to try it on to find out how it fits.

KNOW WHEN TO SAY NO

Sometimes a clothing item just isn't for you. If it's not quite right, don't buy it. Or if you bought it and you are having second thoughts, bring it back. Value Village welcomes buyers to exchange their purchases within seven days so you can save your pocket money for items that feel just right.

CONSIDER GETTING IT TAILORED

If you find a $5 jacket in just the right shade of blue, but it doesn't quite fit, consider getting it altered at a tailor. It will still cost far less than it would new, and you will have a great piece that will last you for years.

Value Village ECO-STATS

Geroy Simon. Legendary Rider and future CFL hall of famer hangs up his helmet after 15 years

marco.vigliotti@metronews.ca

It's a storybook ending to one of the most memorable careers in Canadian Football League history, as one of this era's all-time greats takes his final bow in the country's top football market.

Future hall of fame receiver Geroy Simon announced his retirement from professional football on Wednesday, months after catching two touchdown passes in leading the Saskatchewan Roughriders to victory in last year's Grey Cup game in Regina.

"It's been a great ride. I've had a lot of fun," Simon, a 15-year CFL veteran, told reporters at Mosaic Stadium. "My playing days are over, but the rest of my career is moving forward."

The 38-year-old — the league's all-time leader in receptions and receiving yards — will remain with the Riders in an ambassador and scouting position that general manager Brendan Taman said is still being "defined."

"I'm not finished with football," Simon said of his new position. "It's more of a transition than anything."

After being acquired in early 2013 from the B.C. Lions, he played in a reduced role in his one season with the Green and White.

Simon didn't enjoy the same prominence he had earned during his 12 seasons in British Columbia, where he won two championships, and was viewed as one of many talents dotting a potent Saskatchewan receiving corps.

Still, it was a historic year for the Johnstown, Pa., native. Simon surpassed Ben Cahoon to become the CFL's career receptions leaders during a game in August against the Montreal Alouettes.

He closed out the 2013 season by making his first touchdown catch in a Grey Cup game.

"I've accomplished what I expected to accomplish here, not only (for) myself but for the team and the organization," Simon added. "It was a great year."

Justin Williams scored 4:36 into overtime as the Los Angeles Kings rallied to edge the New York Rangers 3-2 in Game 1 of the Stanley Cup final on Wednesday.

Dan Girardi fanned on a clearing attempt and the puck went to Mike Richards, who found Williams alone in front and the forward scored high to the stick side.

After going down 2-0 early, the Kings tied it up in the second period and came on like a freight train in the third period — outshooting New York 20-3. But the Rangers threatened late in a wild ending to regulation time.

New York goalie Henrik Lundqvist and the Kings' Jonathan Quick both lived up to their reputations on the night, with Quick busy early and Lundqvist late in an end-to-end game.

The Rangers managed 25 shots in regulation time. The shots were 2-2 in OT.

Game 2 goes Saturday at the Staples Center with advantage Los Angeles.

Los Angeles finished 10th overall in the league during the regular season with 100 points, four ahead of No. 12 New York.

Horoscopes

♈ Aries
March 21 - April 20
What happens today may convince you that you have allowed yourself to be lulled into a false sense of security but even if it's true it is no big deal. You're smart enough to handle whatever fate sends your way.

♉ Taurus
April 21 - May 21
Why are you trying to do everything the hard way? Not only is it unnecessary but it could also be self-defeating. Be who you are, not who you think others want you to be.

♊ Gemini
May 22 - June 21
A challenge will confront you today but you will overcome it with ease. Take action quickly and don't doubt for a moment that you will succeed. Good things are coming your way.

♋ Cancer
June 22 - July 23
It is important that you think things through carefully today. There is a danger that you will act hastily and regret it later, so slow down, think about what it is you want to do and work slowly towards that goal.

♌ Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
Something will happen today to make you wonder if you've been too hasty in reaching certain conclusions. Just because some people have a way of life that is radically different to your own does not make them bad.

♍ Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
It may feel as if you're under the thumb at home and work, but there is no point getting stressed about it. Wait for the cosmic outlook to change, which it should do any day.

♎ Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
You're in an adventurous mood but this may not be the best time to venture into areas you don't know about. Wait until the full moon on the 13th has come and gone before moving out of your comfort zone.

♏ Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
Stay calm and keep telling yourself that everything will turn out right in the end. Above all don't allow yourself to get worked up about money matters. There is no reason at all to fear the worst.

♐ Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
Things may get bumpy over the next day or two but if you sit tight the turbulence will pass. If others want to throw tantrums that's up to them. You are under no obligation to follow their example.

♑ Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
Current influences highlight the need to be efficient, to get the most from yourself for the least input of time and energy. Pace yourself and look for ways to get from A to B simply.

♒ Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
A clash of egos could get rather heated over the next 24 hours, but the results should be positive. Hopefully it will get you thinking in new and more profitable directions.

♓ Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
Your world will be rocked by what happens over the next few days but later you will look back and realize it was all for the best. Ultimately all change is good for you. SALLY BROMPTON
